

HOKE SMITH IN ATTACK ON ENGLAND

SCORES TRADE POLICY

Declares Firmness Must Be Exercised to Secure a Settlement of Controversy—Urges Rights of Neutral Nations.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Washington, Jan. 20.—Great Britain's interference with neutral trade was the subject of a vigorous and exhaustive speech in the senate today by Senator Hoke Smith of Georgia, who pleaded for action to prevent England from advancing her own trade at the expense of the United States while attempting to destroy Germany commercially. He declared that the rights of citizens of the United States and other neutral nations were being recklessly disregarded and emphasized particularly what he denounced as Great Britain's lawless treatment of American cotton trade.

Cotton as Contraband.
Discussing the action of the allies in proclaiming cotton as contraband, the senator asserted cotton had not been used or needed by Germany or her allies in manufacture of war munitions.

for more than eight months. He quoted from a statement prepared for him by Howard W. Bible, now in Washington, after a trip to Germany, who reported that he had learned through personal investigation

Germany had developed a process for using wood pulp as a cheaper and more effective substitute for cotton in the manufacture of explosives. Senator Smith reviewed the whole

British authorities also were quoted as proving that under international law foodstuffs are subject to seizure only when actually consigned to the armed forces of an enemy.

England Depends on U. S.

"Shall we quietly continue to furnish Great Britain what she is compelled to obtain from the United States while the commercial rights of citizens of this country are trampled under foot," asked the senator. "Great Britain cannot continue the war without munitions from the United States. Great Britain cannot feed her population without foodstuffs from the United States."

States and other neutrals. Great Britain cannot keep her million and a half people engaged in the Lancashire mills sixty days without cotton from the United States. Great Britain cannot governish her colonies.

"The administration has forcibly brought to light the fact that the world-wide domination of commerce in her vast products of cotton manufactured fabrics without cotton from the United States.

It has been demonstrated that citizens of neutral countries have the right to ship foodstuffs and cotton in unlimited quantities through neutral ports of

A woman entered a store to buy a pair of shoes. The obliging clerk, after trying for some time to fit her, remarked:

"Madam, it seems to me that one of your feet is larger than the other."

The woman rose quickly, glared at the clerk and left the store. She entered another store. Another obliging clerk, after trying on several pairs, remarked:

"Madam, one of your feet is smaller than the other."

"I make this pair," said she, smiling sweetly, and she has traded there ever since.

Why She Was Silent.

A very silent old woman was once asked why it was she had so little to say. She replied that when she was a young girl she was very ill and could not talk for a long time, whereupon she made a vow that if speech were given her once more she would never again say anything unkind of anybody. And thus she was as they found her.—Exchange.

EVE IN A TAXICAB CALLS FOR HER ADAM NEXT MONDAY NIGHT

Tables Reversed on Monday Night
When Girls Will Take Boys to Dancing Party.

If you responded to the front hall door bell about 8:45 o'clock next Monday evening to greet a demure little Miss who informs you perky, "I have come for William," or John, or Charles, or whatever your male offspring's given name chances to be, don't be late. It's father and don't show your ignorance of such an occasion and procedure, but just beckon her in and to a chair with the rejoinder, "Pray be seated," "Will be down in a moment."

Out at the curb edge there will be a chugging taxicab (they always chug on such occasions), but do not be alarmed at this, however, for the fur-bedecked and party-gowned visitor is not an arch-conspirator of the demimonde calibre, and she has no plans and no mind to carry off your son, and her waiting car—pronounced A-R on such and similar occasions—is not the vehicle to bear away fond youngster and his suave, nattily dressed cavalier.

Here's the secret, Pa, so don't make a blunder Monday night.
For ten days past, or more, the Janesville young ladies, are behind word from some fair female friend to ask them to the Leap Year party.
Don't that startle you? But it's a fact. The girls are reversing custom this D. 1916 (divide it by four and you'll realize it's Leap Year) and are going to blow themselves in style and show the boys a time.

The K. J. A. girls, a club of thirteen Janesville young ladies, are behind the innovation which is to be held in Terpsichorean hall. Three hundred invitations were mailed to as many Janesville girls. Since then Janesville boys have had much ado speculating as to what young lady would bid him be her partner.

In offices and stores this week the girls are buzzing with excitement and the Leap Year dance is the topic of conversation, but not more so however, than, "Who's she going to take?" The boys are just as excited as the girls. Safe to say there are going to be no wafers. None of the young ladies are contemplating to take more than one fellow.

So, you see, Dad, it is up to you to know the things of elite procedure of the age and of the young lady in it.
Also, don't forget to urge gently inform her to "Bring Will home early."
She plans to take him to the cafe for supper after the dance and then hustle him home at a gallop.

Misses Lydia McKibbin, Hazel
Brennan, Mary Flannigan and Gladys Kelly are the committee appointed by the club to make all arrangements.

BIG INTEREST SHOWN IN BIBLE INSTITUTE

Forty-eight Register at Initial Meeting Held Last Evening at Methodist Church.

Forty-eight persons registered in the Janesville Bible Institute, which was organized last evening at the Methodist church along the lines suggested by the national meeting of Sunday school workers. Following the state Sunday school convention last fall, it is probable that the membership in the institute will be materially increased.
The institute promises to be of high grade and invaluable to Sunday school teachers.

H. C. Busell was chosen director of the institute. Those in charge of the various sessions are as follows: Miss Mary Buckmaster, beginners' section;
Miss Ella Jacobson, primary section;
Reverend F. H. Brigham, junior section; C. R. Beaumont, intermediate section; and Prof. F. J. Lowth, senior section.

The institute is conducted for adults who are interested in Bible study. Although the courses will be arranged with special reference to teaching in the Sunday schools, persons who do not teach are welcome to enroll, and will get full benefit of the courses.
Meetings will be held on each Wednesday evening at seven-thirty o'clock at the Cargill M. E. church. It is planned that the first portion of the session will be a lecture on some Bible topic, and the remainder of the evening will be secured for the speaker for next week being Dr. Barton of Oak Park, Ill., who conducts a similar institute in his own church. Later it is planned to invite one of the Jewish rabbis of Milwaukee, to speak and Prof. W. H.
Baird of Beloit college will probably give an address.

The general session of the institute will divide into classes for the purpose of studying the Bible for various portions of the Bible.

Eminent Physicians Failed In Kidney Trouble

I wish to inform you of the great benefit I have derived from the use of Swamp-Root. I had been a sufferer more than three years from Kidney and Liver trouble and was almost constantly treated by the most eminent physicians, who could only give me temporary relief. I could not sleep from one room to the other without waking up, and had been in bed five days when I began the use of Swamp-Root. Inside of four hours I could see some benefit.
I had used two bottles when I really felt that my old trouble was completely cured; and I am positive that any person suffering with kidney or liver trouble can be cured by the use of this preparation. I am 50 years of age and in good health. I had this trouble and I do not know how to express myself as strongly as I desire in favor of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root.
I am sure that it saved my life, and that my health is due to this remedy.
I heartily recommend it to every sufferer of kidney trouble.

Yours truly,

Charles Elmer Reilly, son of Mrs.
Reilly, 302 North Pearl street, is no member of troop H., of the Seventh United States cavalry stationed at Douglas, Arizona. Right in the center of the controversy is a dispute.
Young Reilly enlisted in the regular army the day after Thanksgiving at Jefferson barracks, Mo. He was stationed there until this past week, when he was ordered to the cavalry and sent to the front. It was from his company that the seven men were supposed to have been captured by Mexican bandits Wednesday, and relatives and friends here were most anxious until the report of the capture was denied this morning in press dispatches.

SLIPPERY WALK IS CAUSE OF ACCIDENT

J. J. Smith Breaks Bones of Leg In Sidewalk Accident Wednesday Afternoon.

Slippery walks endangered pedestrians last evening and today, and several accidents resulted. J. J. Smith, elderly, fell and broke both bones of his left leg, just above the knee, in walking over a slippery coal hole plate on Jackson street yesterday afternoon about five o'clock.

The break proved to be a serious one and Mr. Smith was carried to a drug store, where he was given the attention of a physician. Later he was moved to his home at 206 Holmes street, where he will be confined for several weeks.

The injuries received by George Hiller, who resides on Center and West avenue, are proving more serious.
He was moved to his home at 206 Holmes street, where he will be confined for several weeks.

OBITUARY.

James McEwan.

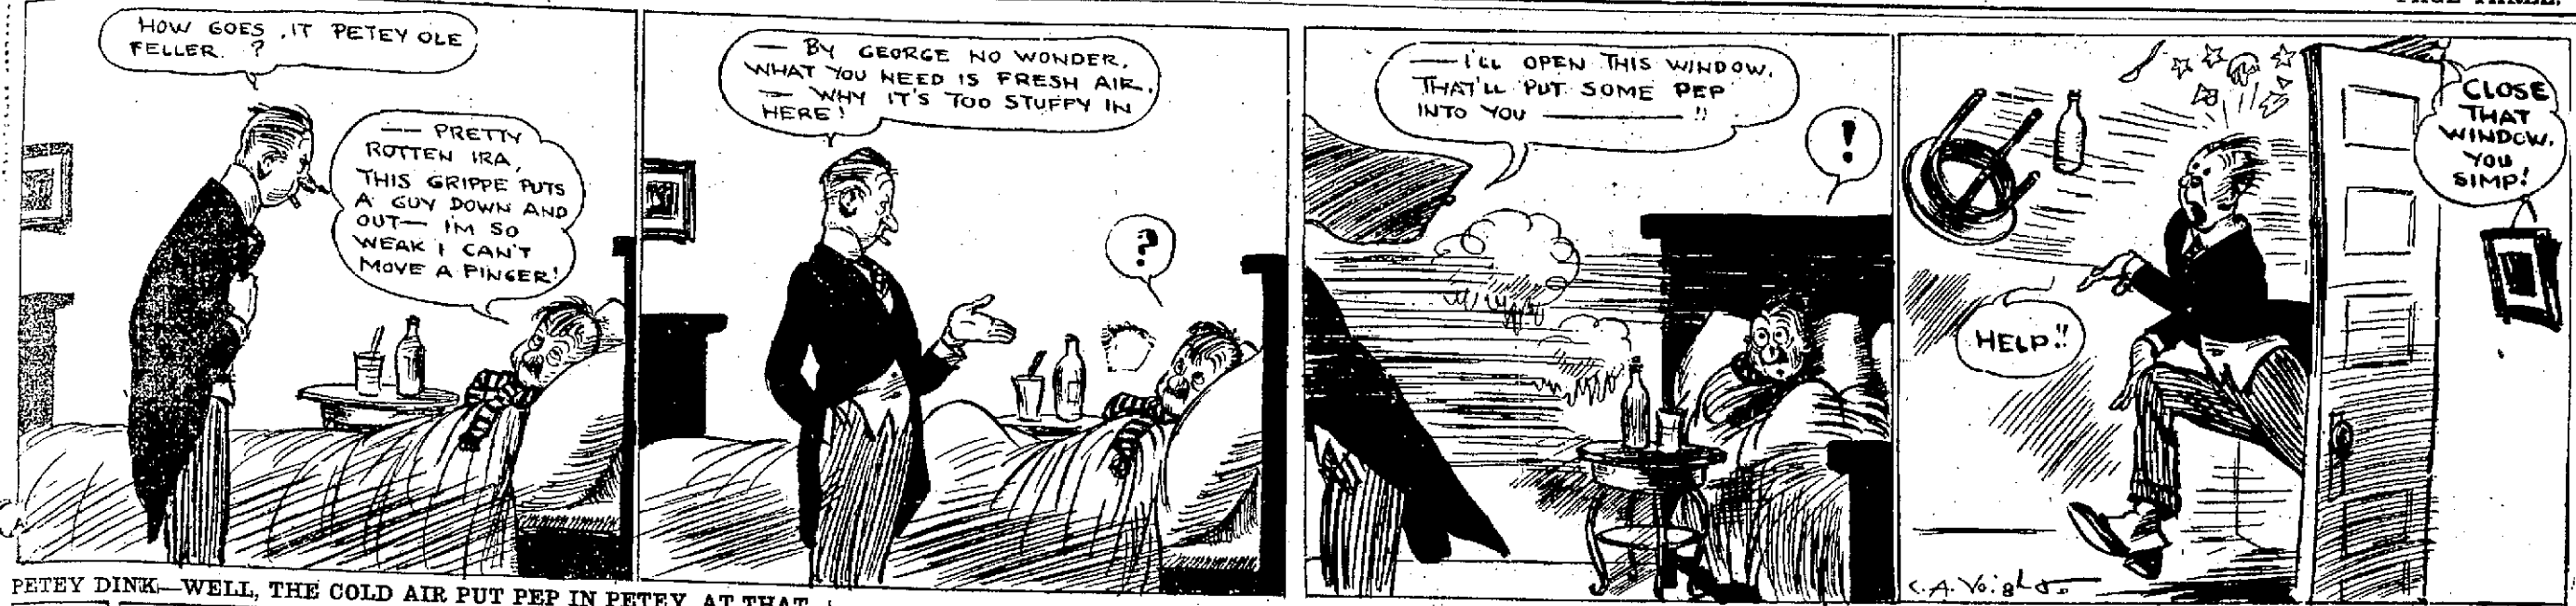

Milton, Jan. 20.—James McEwan,
born in Dalginross, Comrie, Scotland,
May 8, 1823, the youngest of the family of nine children of William and Elizabeth Dow McEwan died in Milton, Wis., Jan. 13, 1916, aged 92 years, 8 months and 5 days. He was educated in the parish schools of his native land.

In June, 1838, in company with his mother, four sisters and brother, William, he sailed from Greenock on the sailing vessel "Lady of the Lakes" and after a fifty-three days' voyage landed in New York, whence they came by rail, Erie Canal and Great Lakes to Milwaukee where his brother, Peter, met them, and conveyed them in wagon drawn by oxen, over the river in a ferry boat, then over new and rough roads, part of them corduroy, to Milton or Prairie Du Lac, as it was then called. It was a three-days' drive, owing to a delay caused by a break in the wagon, and they arrived here September 11, 1838. He was only a boy of fifteen then and liked in his latter years to tell of working on the new land, following the Indian trail to Black Hawk gorges and visiting "Squire Dixon's" at Janesville, a city of two houses, and his father's home with his trained Indian pony.

He had partially learned his trade of carpenter in his native land and after some years' work on his brother's farm he went to Milwaukee, traveling on foot, and there worked as his trade for four years, aiding in building business houses there. Returning to Milton he built many houses there and in the country, was one of the those still standing being the M. E.

SPORT SCANDAL IN ENGLAND LIKE IN BASEBALL IN U. S.

Professional Sport in All Parts of the World Received Setback During the Last Year.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

New York, Jan. 20.—That professional sport receives periodical setbacks, no matter in what part of the world it is staged, is shown by recent events both in this country and England. Baseball is just emerging from a season of depression, financial and otherwise, in this country, while in England soccer, which corresponds to baseball in the United States, is being subjected to an investigation and housecleaning. Public interest in professional soccer has been seriously affected throughout the British Isles, by disclosures which involved the honesty of some of the players. The facts were brought out at an inquiry conducted by the Football League and the Football Association, with the result that eight men were permanently barred from playing. Four of these professionals were members of the Liverpool club, three belonged to the Manchester United club and the other one played on the team of the Chester club. No suspicion was attached to any officials of these organizations, but it was proved that certain players conspired to throw the game, placed bets on the match last season.

In England professional football—the association or soccer game—takes the place of professional baseball in the United States. Rugby is confined to colleges, and cricket corresponds to tennis so far as public interest is concerned. But the big association matches draw crowds ranging from 50,000 to 100,000, while there is no field large enough to accommodate the people at the final match for the FA Cup in times of peace. Like professional baseball, professional football has managed to keep an untarnished reputation as a general thing. But in spite of heavy gate receipts, the British professionals are poorly paid and their small pay may have tempted the accused men to make a bit on the side by dishonest playing.

Rifle Tournament. Twenty military schools have entered teams for the national shooting trophy for military schools presented by the war department. The matches, open to teams of ten cadets from any military school, rifle club, affiliated with the National Rifle Association, begin Jan. 22 and continue to March 1. The shooting is to be weekly. Besides the trophy, ten silver medals will be presented to the winning team in Class A and ten bronze medals to the winning team in Class B. Each team is composed of ten men and the five best scores count for record. Ten shots standing and ten shots prone will constitute each man's shooting in each match. Rifles used are the regulation .22 calibre and judges appointed by the rifle association will witness each match.

Long distance ice skaters are looking forward with interest to the Marathon skating race which is planned for Cohoes, N. Y. This month is proposed to stage the race at 26 miles and 385 yards, the full marathon distance. Several of the best skaters have entered and the race should be of unusual interest.

Frank Mantell, the former middleweight, who retired from the ring recently, has been appointed to the police force of Dayton, O. He will act as physical director to the force in addition to acting as boxing instructor to the strong arm squad.

HIGH TOSSERS WORK HARD FOR MADISON

First Hard Game of the Season Comes Friday Night With Madison High School.

Friday night the Janesville high school basketball five will have its first real test of strength when they play the Madison high. The Capital City team is very strong and has not lost a game since the season began. The contest as a whole was full of excitement and being the first appearance of the Cardinal bowlers, a large gallery of Lakota club members was on hand to back their five.

Osborn of the winners rolled high scores for the evening, 210 of the match falling before his drives in the first game. He followed closely by Helge of the All Stars, who drew 188. The heaviest scoring was registered in this hit. Both teams opened up heavy and when casualties were figured on the first sheet the Miller men led by a single pin, 887 to 886. They won the second game, 828 to 815, through excellent playing.

Captain Richards of the Cardinals was way off form in this game and lowered his average considerably when he was able to get but 121. The third frame, however, was the deciding factor of victory for the Lakotas.

Miller's opening poorly and continued 80, getting a total of but 733. Their opponents had better luck and finished with 804, which made the total to 2,506, against 2,498 for the All Stars.

Stanley's Colts won last night at the Miller alleys in a match called the Scraper's Barbers. In all three events the Colts took a wide lead and not once did the barbers have a chance.

In the K. C. League the Balboas won from the DeLeons in a close game by 35 pins. W. Cronin took the honors for having the highest score when he rolled 208. In another game the Columbus team won from the Magellans by a good margin. Lineups:

BELOIT COLLEGE QUINT TO PLAY IN MINNESOTA

Captain Don Korst and his squad of basketball toppers representing the Beloit college, passed through Janesville this morning enroute for Winona, Minn. The "Gold" is scheduled for a three day tour of Minnesota. Their first game will be played at Beloit, the second at Carleton college of Northfield, and the third at Prairie du Chien. They will return to Beloit, Sunday, via Dubuque and the Illinois Central to Rockford.

Another local product, is also with the Beloit squad, and is playing a forward position opposite Korst. Both are seniors at the college.

GOIN FOR THE CUBS WILL BE PAID TODAY

Chicago, Ill., Jan. 20.—The formal passing of the Chicago National League baseball club from the ownership of Charles P. Taft to Charles H. Weegman will take place on Thursday at noon. This statement was made Wednesday night by President Weegman of the Chicago club. Mr. Weegman said that the check was ready for presentation to Charles Schmalstig, the representative of Mr. Taft, who arrived in Chicago on Wednesday. Mr. Schmalstig and Mr. Weegman held a conference on Wednesday night, arranging some minor details in regard to the transfer of the stock.

LAKOTA CARDINALS WIN BY EIGHT PINS

Heavy Attack in Third Frame by Clubmen Spells Defeat for Miller's All Stars.

Captain Doc Richards and his Lakota Cardinal bowling team last night, at the Miller alleys, won their first game with Miller's All Stars fell in defeat, eight pins being the deciding total. The contest as a whole was full of excitement and being the first appearance of the Cardinal bowlers, a large gallery of Lakota club members was on hand to back their five.

MORRIS MILLER

Fielder Jones' big job as manager of the Browns is indicated by the statement that he has fifty-seven players on his combined list. Twenty-one of them are pitchers. While there will be no team limit for the Browns, the new owners necessarily will not attempt to carry more than one-half of the fifty-seven, and it will be down to the mines with the other half, though some of them still will draw major league salaries for a year or so.

Report has it that Manager Charley Horner of the Cincinnati Reds wants John Corrien from Louisville to play second base for him next year. Corrien did good work at the key position for the Colonels last season.

Cozy Dolan, one of the Cardinals' outfielders, has been given his unconditional release by Miller Huggins.

The move apparently was a very popular one, for the St. Louis papers referred to it as the most pleasing piece of news that has been printed in many years in St. Louis. Dolan apparently did not have many friends among the Mound City scribes and they are tickled that he has been sent on his way.

Frank Chance is to have the Cubs' farm out in Los Angeles. Three of the recruits whom Bresnahan was giving a trial have been shipped to Los Angeles. They are Fisher, McElarry and Schorr, who were all considered by Bresnahan as being very promising.

Is coffee injurious to athletes? Yes is the claim, but Mr. Frank Moran of Pittsburgh, aspirant for the heavyweight crown, has discovered a new and harmless kind—a pure Irish Coffey. And, happily, it is not "black" Coffey. He unhesitatingly recommends this Coffey to heavyweight aspirants; but cautions that the "cocco" of Coffey should be drunk vigorously, if found too strong. By so doing a strong Irish Coffey becomes weak and harmless—but hard to "stir." Mr. Moran demonstrated this and the referee yelled "out!" At first, this statement puzzled him; as he could not see on what grounds Coffey could be called "out," when it was plainly to be seen that Coffey was "all in." The successful demonstration lasted but a few minutes, and seems to have inspired quite a lot of confidence in Mr. Moran—in fact, he is now confident that he will dispose of the champion, "Jessa," as quickly as he did Coffey. Yes, and seems perfectly Frank about it, too!

Talk is that the Buffalo International may move over to the park abandoned by the Buffalo Reds. The location is a good one, and by taking over the lease the international league club would relieve the disrupted Reds of quite a heavy obligation in the way of a lease.

PLUG CHEWING A WHOLESOME HABIT

In No Other Way Can You Get All the Richness and Flavor of the Leaf

"SPEAR HEAD" BEST CHEW

Many prominent physicians declare chewing to be the most wholesome way of enjoying tobacco. "I began chewing some years ago," said one, "and I soon found that it is the only way to get the benefit of all the rich juices stored up by nature in tobacco leaf. I refer, of course, to the plug form of tobacco, which is the most natural and the cleanest form."

"Chewing good tobacco like Spear Head makes the salivary glands more active, which in turn has a beneficial effect on the whole system. Add to this the sweet, mellow, delicious flavor of a chew of Spear Head, and you have the highest possible degree of tobacco satisfaction."

"I mention Spear Head because I have found that this brand is exceptionally pure, being made in a factory that is run strictly according to pure-food laws."

Spear Head is made of sun-ripened Burley, which is acknowledged to be the richest, mildest, finest flavored tobacco leaf in the world. And it is produced by the latest processes, which develop the quality and luscious flavor of the choice Burley to the supreme degree.

A chew of Spear Head has a wholesome relish that is not found in any other chewing tobacco. Try a 5c or 10c cut.

OFFER OF FIVE THOUSAND FOR WHITE AND DUNDEE

DENVER, Colo., Jan. 20.—Promoter Jack Kanner of the National Amateur Boxing Association, who has offered a purse of $5,000 for a twenty round bout between Charley White of Chicago and Johnny Dundee, Kanner has offered the boxers his decoration day date, and Scotty Montie, manager of Dundee, has accepted the terms. Kanner has wired White and is expecting a favorable answer. The battle, if arranged, will be staged at the stockyard stadium in Denver. The bout will be for the lightweight championship of America, which is now claimed by Dundee.

GIBBONS CONSIDERING OFFER TO MEET DARCY

St. Paul, Minn., Jan. 20.—Prospects of an Easter Sunday fight between Les Harry and Mike Gibbons at Sydney, Australia, for the middleweight championship looked bright on Wednesday. Gibbons, fresh from his slam bang one round knockout of Young Abeam of England here last Tuesday night, on Wednesday was considering an offer of Tom Andrews of Milwaukee for a twenty round bout with Darcy.

Andrews guaranteed the phantom $10,000.

ERTLE AND WILLIAMS MAY FIGHT IN NEW YORK

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.) New York, Jan. 20.—Johnny Ertle has accepted the terms of the Harlem Sporting club to box Kid Williams in a return match. It is expected up to Sam Harris, manager of Williams, to clinch the bout. Ertle is under contract with the Harlem Sporting club for three bouts. The first of these is scheduled for Friday night against Jack Soles.

THE SENATORSHIP.

It appears to be the consensus of opinion that the coming statewide gathering of republicans scheduled to be held at Madison, Thursday, January 27th, will take up the question of endorsement of any candidate for the nomination of the United States senator or the selection of a state ticket, but confine their duties simply to placing in nomination a list of men to be voted for as delegates to the national republican convention at Chicago in June, at the April election.

This is apparently a wise decision in the opinion of the majority of those as to who would be the most desirable candidate for this position of official candidate for United States senatorial nomination by the republicans of the state can be relied upon. Thus far John M. Whitehead is the only avowed candidate, but it is certain that he will be opposed by La Follette and possibly by a second progressive placed in nomination by the McGovern faction of this branch of Wisconsin republicans in retaliation for the failure of La Follette to back the former governor in his aspirations for gubernatorial nomination.

The Milwaukee Sentinel, discussing the senatorial question, says:

"Says the Appleton Post, apropos of the senatorial situation, 'Let the convention decide on the opponent of Senator La Follette and other aspirants support the choice.'

"Absolutely sound, as a general proposition. But it can hardly apply to the fast approaching convention to be held this month for the specific purpose of naming delegates to the national convention.

"The Post observes that the names of several men have already been mentioned for the senatorship: Messrs. Whitehead, Max Jeffris, Esch, Cooper, Yes, and some others, Messrs. Krautner, Alexander, Baensch, etc. But, so far as we know, only one of all of those gentlemen, Mr. Whitehead, is formally in the field.

"There can be no doubt that Mr. Jeffris, for instance, would make a very formidable opponent for Mr. La Follette. But Mr. Jeffris is naturally and honorably a little backward about coming forward and showing his redoubtable hat in the ring, now that his estimable fellow townsman and friend has announced himself. A convention bent on picking a man who beyond a peradventure could make things very warm in more ways than one for Mr. La Follette, might think very favorably of Mr. Jeffris; but Mr. Jeffris has given no sign that he is in the field.

"Then take Mr. Esch, a man of national reputation for sound and level-headed work in congress.

"Mr. Esch is much talked of by his friends for the candidacy, and undoubtedly is not just the man whom Mr. La Follette would like for an opponent. But here, again, it is a case of 'speak for yourself, John.'

"So far as we can gather, the objections generally raised when his name is mentioned is that Mr. Esch won't run. Mr. Esch is supposed to be pretty firmly convinced of the wisdom of the unenterprising adage about the bird in the hand, and to require a great deal of 'showing' as to the attainability of the two in the bush.

"So, as the situation now is, there is only one open and professed senatorial candidate in the field. A convention is only nine days off. The time is too short to get the predicated panel of candidates in the field. A convention can not decide among candidates until they are candidates among whom to decide.

"Gentlemen merely mentioned by their friends are not candidates in the right sense of the word. It will be remembered that the June convention of 1914 let itself and the party in for considerable embarrassment by prematurely selecting for places on the state ticket men who subsequently declined to run.

"As we have been given to understand this January convention is to meet for the specific purpose of naming national convention delegates, state matters to be postponed for a subsequent convention. In view of the above considerations, the obviously, and we should think the only, practical thing to do is to let the senatorial question severely alone at the first convention, passing it on for action at the second.

"In the meantime, senatorial candidates can develop, and the convention will have an opportunity to do some selecting. It is fairly possible that the result of the June national convention delegates may materially change present factors in the situation."

The danger of catching the grip in public assemblages are keenly realized at church time Sunday morning, but they are seen to be largely illusory when it comes time to go to the movie show Monday evening.

SEEING THINGS BY DAY.

"Seeing things at night is one of the prerogatives of childhood. Seeing things by day on the floor of the senate is among the privileges guaranteed senators courtesy in the Washingtonian sense. Senator Williams gravely warns the country that the time to prepare for trouble is when the Kaiser—why dodge the name?—must lead his millions back to work in factories which have been destroyed and for which capital has vanished, when their victories have inclined them to the confines of the earth, say, to exchange."

Contrast this with Judge Gary's fear that the Kaiser, the Czar, King George and President Poincaré will, irrespective of the military outcome, really lead their millions back to work shops which have not been destroyed or deprived of necessary working capital, there to turn out more and cheaper goods than ever before for 'dumping' in this country. Senator Williams years ago emerged immediately with a vastly increased military power. The Williams theory is that, as it is impossible for a nation industrially to survive a war, victory compels it to keep right on in endless wars of conquest.

"The fact is that the victorious millions of a despot do not follow the eagles of empire to the confines of the earth nowadays. Those stately bipeds have been so far demoralized as to come home to roost. The senator's shudders over the spectre of another Napoleon leave us indifferent. Too many revolutions in political and economic thought have taken place since Napoleon's day to leave him the ghost of a chance even as a dark horse in this presidential year 1916."

PUBLIC SAFETY.

At a meeting a few days ago of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce a movement was started to promote greater consideration for public safety and comfort. The courtesies of the road are to be emphasized and the effort made to create better standards of good manners on the public highways.

The automobile manufacturers who make up this organization evidently realize the difficulty of this problem of adjusting motor vehicles to conditions of traffic created long before the motor car came into existence.

It has sometimes seemed as if the sentiment of the motorist was one of intolerance toward a slow, dull public, who were behind the times enough to walk or depend on horses. This is of course unfair to the great majority of motorists who are careful and considerate. But no matter how courteous the great majority may be, the reckless and arrogant minority give a bad name to the whole tribe. Hence it is refreshing to read that this Chamber of Commerce is planning a campaign of education for such drivers as need it, to promote a greater degree of responsibility and a sense of the value of the rules and courtesies of the road.

As chairman of the committee, has before him this task to promote the growth of such a spirit of good manners that a breach of the same will bring contempt on the discourteous driver.

When the speeder and road hog will be considered just as boorish as the man who violates the laws of table manners, something will be accomplished. There are many people for whom bad form has more terrors than the law.

There are many men who would feel chagrined, and even disgraced, were they to forget, on entering a room, to let the ladies pass first. Yet some of these same men will go honking down through a busy street, twenty-five miles an hour, abruptly ordering the public to wait until they pass. This kind of thing will some day be regarded in the same light as eating pie with a knife.

MILITARY VS. BUSINESS.

When discussion began about the means by which the United States army could be strengthened, it was at once recognized that perhaps the greatest obstacle in the way lies in the difficulty of adjusting the demands of military training to business life. Employers are loath to let their young men absent themselves from work to attend military camps. Young men are fearful that such absences would be an obstacle in the way of their business success.

However, the young man who takes a course of training with a militia organization, or should take one with the proposed Continental army, would learn many things not taught in business offices. If he devotes himself to military work with energy and zeal, he should in due course of time attain some promotion, where he would be placed in command of a small squad of men. He would then get practice in a very valuable art, that of commanding men.

Military boys are sent to expensive military schools and colleges for costly courses, largely to acquire just this valuable gift. The ability to direct a body of men, command them, respect, enforce prompt obedience and discipline, is a superb training in leadership. It develops self confidence, ability to think quickly, meet emergencies. Many men fall in life for lack of just this group of qualities.

Whether or not a boy was promoted to any military command or not, he would find militia service rewarding. The outdoor life would give him physical vigor. The leadership of the alert and active men who come to the front in military life would form pleasant association and enjoy experiences far more interesting than those of ordinary town and business life. Business firms may at first be reluctant to see their young men absent on military duty. After they have seen how the fellows grow and develop under competent military training, they may compete with each other to get boys that have been through this discipline.

To make military work popular with the business community, encampments must be strictly conducted. There must be no dissipation, liquor and other vices must be strictly banished, and the men must return showing in their physical vigor that the life has been wholesome in all respects.

Winter is considered a difficult time to save money, on account of the high cost of fuel, vegetables, etc. There is an equal number of excellent reasons also why spring, summer, and fall are difficult times to save money.

The young people who had such a jolly time putting up a Christmas church decorations never think what a good time they might also have by getting together to take them down.

The principal trouble with the recent strike riot at Youngstown, Ohio, seems to be that it was not occasioned by celebrating New Year's, and that it was caused by drinking whiskey instead of champagne.

Whatever errors the income tax payers make in their returns, they never forget to allow for the tendency of profits to shrink and losses to enlarge.

The Dreamer.

When matrimony sounds the knell of peace, prepare for strife.

The man who weds a reigning belle must lead a sorry life.

Paracelus Potts started. Could he believe his ears?

He could. The beautiful girl next to him in the theatre was again being addressed by her fair companion.

"This show is rotten, Pagoda," came the words.

At last! Eureka! Spirits of nitre! The theatre was again being addressed by her fair companion.

Potts had dreamed a dream in which an angel descended to him and cautioned him to marry no Mabel, Daisy, Western, or anyone else save one called Pagoda.

Paracelus had searched the world, in vain. And now, at last! Eureka! United States of Brazil!

VAN HISE PICTURES

WAR DEBT BURDENS

THAT EUROPE FACES

Heavy Toll Will be Placed on Income Simply to Pay Interest on National Debt He Tells Credit Men.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE]

Chicago, Ill., Jan. 20.—"It is safe to say that in the United Kingdom, Germany and France, for a man whose income is from investments, upon a minimum estimate more than 10 percent will be required in order to pay the interest on the national debt, and state debts."

This statement was made by President Charles R. Van Hise of the University of Wisconsin in an address before the National Association of Credit Men, which he spoke on the subject of the national debts of the United Kingdom, Germany and France and their economic significance.

"In the United States, during the last two years," continued President Van Hise, "there has been a great outcry in regard to high taxes and especially in regard to the income tax. Suppose it were necessary to take 10 percent of income derived from your investment capital, simply to pay the interest on the national debt, and then you would be obliged to pay, in addition, directly or indirectly, taxes sufficient for all of the running expenses of the government, national, state and local, you will then be in the situation in which are the people of the United Kingdom, Germany and France, even if the war were now to end; and if it continues another year or so, as it most probably will, the figure will be proportionately increased—certainly by half and possibly by more than half."

President Van Hise said that for the last two years he has traveled in other countries, and he has seen the European war, such as Russia, Austria, Hungary, Turkey and Bulgaria, the situation is very similar to that of the United Kingdom, Germany and France. France, smaller countries, such as Belgium, Serbia and Poland, the situation is worse.

The only escape from this mighty burden of such excessive taxation, as in effect to involve a total confiscation, or by repudiation; or a combination of the two," continued President Van Hise. "Do not misunderstand me. I am not saying that any of the three things will happen. I am only pointing out that these are the alternatives which are before the nations which have assumed these gigantic burdens."

Assume Socialistic Functions.

"Vast industrial changes have occurred during the war under which the functions of the state have advanced to such a point that the functions of the war would have been called highly socialistic. Regulation in Germany exists not only to the control of production, but almost every essential article, but in regard to the distribution of food. To a less extent the same principles have been applied to other belligerent nations."

To these radical regulatory measures the people will have become accustomed, by the end of the war, and some of them may become permanent. On the other hand, if the measures are really anti-social, that is, if they are opposed to the best development of the human race, it may be that the galling bonds to which the people are bound during the war will be released after its close and the bonds broken. One cannot be sure in which direction the pendulum will move. President Van Hise in this matter will be guided by his philosophic conviction.

President Van Hise laid considerable emphasis on the enormity of the debt which the generation if the future in these European countries must carry.

"For our own modest Civil War debt, of less than 2,758 millions of dollars, after a lapse of more than fifty years, and in a country the wealth of which surpasses that of any other nation, more than one-third still remains."

BIG CROWDS ATTEND PRIZE BIRD SHOWING

FANCIERS AND INTERESTED LOCAL PEOPLE ARE VIEWING
ARRAY OF POULTRY
AT RINK.

GIVING AWAY CHICKENS

Rush Innman of This City is First to Receive Three Birds for Attending Show.

All day Wednesday and this afternoon many people visited the annual exhibit of poultry at the rink building, given by the Southern Wisconsin Poultry association. The attendance yesterday was estimated to be about three hundred and the secretary of the association stated this morning that Friday and Saturday a record crowd was expected.

The big free contest which is conducted every afternoon and evening is causing much interest and all the visitors are eager to get a trio of prize chickens which are awarded to the person having a certain number. Tuesday afternoon Rush Innman of Janesville had the number which was drawn and he was awarded three Buff Orpington fowls which were donated by H. W. Sheldon. Forty-seven, the number drawn Tuesday evening, has not been called yet. The person having this should call at the show and claim his birds.

Yesterday afternoon 109 was drawn and in the evening 210. The persons having these numbers will be awarded the three birds. The afternoon winner will be awarded a trio of White Wyandottes which are donated by E. J. Johnson. A trio of Black Orpingtons donated by C. E. Emmens will be presented to the evening winner.

The judging of the poultry was finished this noon and the winners in the different classes will be announced tomorrow. While looking over the exhibit this morning, W. E. Stanfield of Hillsdale, Michigan, one of the judges at the local show, stated, "In the Black Orpington class I have yet to visit another show where these birds are better." He has visited shows from coast to coast this year, acting as a judge, and saying this is a great boost to the local show. The first cock and hen in the Black Orpington class, he stated, were the finest he has seen this year. The general quality throughout is as good as any show in the state. The class has the largest number of exhibits with a total of 150 birds. The Rhode Island Red class has the next largest number of birds on show, followed by the Barred Rock and Barred Leghorn classes. Judge Laube, in judging a Silver Spangled Hamburg cockerel owned by L. L. Hilton of this city, stated that it was the best he had ever seen in this part of the country. Its score was nearly perfect.

The large showing of water fowl in the center of the building is causing a little interest among the patrons of the show. This part of the exhibit has numerous kinds of geese and different breeds of ducks. A pair of wild mallards are on display. The drake is so small that he could use a teaspoon to swim in. In one pen a number of African bled geese strut around as if they own the whole show.

Children who visit the show should not fail to see the big display of game fowls. These little birds are a fine lot and are of the most thoroughbred type. The Silver Sea Bright and the Black Cochon create much interest.

Twenty silver cups have been put up for prizes by different merchants and individuals of the city.

Genzke Brothers Co. Cup. A valuable silver cup offered for the best pen of Barred Plymouth Rocks.

F. H. Green & Sons Cup. A beautiful silver cup offered for the best pen of Partridge Plymouth Rocks.

SUPREME COURT WILL TRY BELOIT'S CASE SOON AS POSSIBLE

Delegation From County Yesterday Assured Supreme Court Will Act At Once.

For the purpose of bringing a quick result in the court litigation involving the withholding of the money from the city treasuries of Beloit and Madison from the county treasury for highway purposes, a committee composed of Messrs. E. W. Adams of Beloit, District Attorney, S. G. Dunwiddie, H. Southrope of Madison, and William Ryan, attorney, conferred with supreme court judges yesterday over the pending case.

Under the regular channels of law, the case would not be finally decided upon in all probability until 1917, thus interfering with the highway work for the coming year. It is hoped that a test case be made at Madison when the city treasurer of that city would not turn over the highway money to the county on demand, which is due, according to law, in March.

It was decided to "hurry-up" matters to take the case before Judge Stevens, magistrate of the Dane county circuit court, and then appeal it, if necessary, to the supreme court to obtain a final decision to settle the matter.

The question involved is whether the highway law is constitutional, in that money raised within a municipality, to be used in highway work outside of the city, can be demanded specifically by the county and collected through the agreement of the city.

Through the agreement of the city, the supreme court decision the coming April, as the chief justice informed the committee that it would be afforded a place on the court docket at the earliest possible time.

LIVED IN COUNTY FOR MANY YEARS

Mrs. William Lewis, Who Died at Town of Rock Home Last Evening, Was Old Resident.

On Wednesday evening at five o'clock Mrs. William Lewis, one of Rock county's oldest and most highly respected citizens, died at her home in the town of Rock. Mrs. Lewis had been in poor health for several years and death came as a relief to her suffering. A woman of true Christian character she was beloved in the community where she has spent so many years of her life.

To mourn her death the leaves her aged husband, who is in a very old condition, and also two daughters and one son. The late Mrs. Lewis was born in Wisconsin, where she was married to Mr. William Lewis, who was born in Germany on December 14, 1820. Mrs. Lewis is survived by two daughters, Mrs. William Radtke and Mrs. James Lewis, both of this city, and sixteen grandchildren.

The funeral will be held at ten o'clock on Saturday morning from St. Patrick's Catholic church.

NAVAL PROGRAM IN JAPAN ALLOWS FOR BUT ONE BIG SHIP

Sweeping Changes Is Made In Personnel In The Japanese Navy—Lessons Drawn From European War.

Tokio, Jan. 20.—One superdreadnought, two cruisers, one destroyer, three submarines and two special service ships constitute the program of naval building for Japan for the coming year. Admiral Kato, minister for marine, explained the naval expansion project before the budgetary committee of the Diet in response to an interpretation. The battleship will be about the same type as the Fuso and Yamashiro, which was recently launched, and will carry twelve 14-inch guns and sixteen 6-inch guns. The two cruisers will have a speed of 28 knots. They will probably be in the nature of light scout ships. Their armament has not yet been decided. The submarines will have a displacement of seven hundred tons each, a speed of 18 knots on the surface and 10 knots in the water, and will carry one gun.

Admiral Kato expressed the opinion that the war in Europe would not necessitate any considerable alteration in the naval armament of the great powers. He fully recognized, he said, the effectiveness of aircraft and submarines as weapons of offense and demonstrated in the present war but he believed that these facts had affected the position of the battleships as an engine of war. If the Kaiser's warships dare not venture from their own sheltered waters it is because of the powerful British squadrons waiting them outside. The absence of any great naval engagement in Europe must be ascribed to the very great difference between the British and German navies. As for submarines, however, they have actively they might work, their activities were confined within certain limits and they could hardly be expected to place the great battleships hors de combat. The minister said that equipment was now being provided on ships against air attacks. He was confident that the dreadnaught remained the basic unit of great navies.

Use Bigger Guns.

The admiral further said that in deciding the armaments for new battleships the naval authorities preferred the twelve 14-inch guns principle to the eight 15-inch of the British and German navies because they deemed the former more advantageous than the latter from the viewpoint of naval tactics. Furthermore the authorities believed there would occur no change in the shape and size of warships and naval guns in the near future. The minister's remarks brought out the fact that Japan's eventual program includes the establishment of a first line fleet of eight battleships and eight great battle cruisers.

Admiral Kato was asked particularly by Kobayashi, a member of the committee, as to the comparative strength of the Japanese navy and those of Great Britain, Germany and the United States. The member also wanted to know whether the naval authorities were confident of victory in case of war for instance, in case of war with the United States. He asked what plan the navy had in case the United States attacked Japan with her naval strength twice that of the Japanese navy. To this Admiral Kato replied that figures do not always decide the issue of a battle. He is quoted as having added: "If the American navy invades Japan we have only to encounter it with the best tactics and art of warfare, to the last vessel and last man, meanwhile relying on the dignity of the august emperor and the strong support of a sixty millions nation. This is the decision of our navy in such an eventuality."

Change in Navy.

Simultaneous with the opening of the Diet has come a sweeping change in the personnel of the navy. Especially noteworthy is the appointment of Vice Admiral Yashiro, ex-minister of the navy, to be commander-in-chief of the second squadron; Vice Admiral Nawa as commander-in-chief of the third squadron; Vice Admiral Murakami as commander-in-chief of the first squadron; Vice Admiral Yamaya, who commanded the Japanese squadron in the southern seas during the war operations last year, as Vice chief of the naval board of command; and the transfer of Vice Admiral Takarabe from command of the third squadron to the command of the second squadron.

Since resigning as minister of marine, Vice Admiral Yashiro, who won the applause of the public as leader of the navy cleansing in connection with the scandal of last year, has been living a secluded life in a suburb of Kyoto, devoting himself to the study of Buddhist philosophy. His appointment to the new post together with his reputation as a lawyer service has attracted much approval.

The changes are generally regarded in Tokyo as indicating a commencement of waning of the influence of men of Satsuma extraction. The great leaders in the navy have always come from Satsuma province, hence the navy power has come to be known as Satsuma.

ENGLAND IS EXPECTED TO PUT FATS AND OILS ON CONTRABAND LIST

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE)

London, Jan. 20.—Great Britain is expected soon to put fats and oils on the list of absolute contraband, just as she has done with explosives. Scientists have been demanding that this be done for some time, saying it is the ignorance of government officials concerning the use of fats and oils in the making of high explosives which has left this raw material supply open to Germany this long. Prof. B. B. Poulton of Oxford calls it "the national neglect of science," saying "It is dangerous to ignore the existence and prosperity should be ruled by politicians and civil servants, with hardly an exception, are utterly ignorant of science. Lawyers, politicians, fixing their attention more steadily on American friendship than German defeat, have permitted the export from England of materials for propulsive ammunition, fats and oils. Cotton is already on the absolute contraband list, this action having been taken after a widespread campaign by scientists who claimed that cotton exported to Germany was merely so much ammunition for the German army. Sir William Ramsay, leader of the scientists' campaign against cotton, has begun a campaign against fats and oils which he deems vital to German ammunition making. Sir William declared today: "One of Germany's ammunition for heavy guns consists of nitro-glycerine and fats are the source of glycerine. I really can't understand the incredible folly of going on providing the Germans with means of killing our men. Untold thousands of lives and an ever growing volume of human misery are a terrible punishment for the neglect of science. It is possible that military experts are mistaken in thinking the final decision in this war can be reached by fighting. It may have to be reached by economic and financial pressure. England's official ignorance of science, as applied to war has lengthened the struggle. Sir William declared, continuing: "If the government had seriously considered this possibility at the outset and made preparations accordingly, asking for and accepting advice on the subject, the war long would have been over. Many well known British scientists have joined Sir William in his newest campaign against the export of fats and oils. It is predicted that the government soon will turn over to the Navy the question of keeping Germany from getting these commodities."

Light Bread.

"Good morning," said an old lady briskly, entering a baker's shop. "Permit me to compliment you on the lightness of your bread."

The baker rubbed his hands and smiled benignly. "Thank you, madam," he said proudly, but respectfully. "It is my aim to bake the lightest bread in this city."

"And you do it," said the old lady. "If it gets much lighter it'll take two of your pound loaves to weigh sixteen ounces!"—London Mail.

Charles Cherry in VERY GOOD PICTURE

Well Known Stage Star Makes First Appearance Before the Screen.

"The Mummy and the Humming Bird," the old Charles Frohman production, was the vehicle for Charles Cherry's debut into the film world at the Apollo yesterday. It was a well-knit and commendable picture, well acted and well set and directed, justifying anew the logical worth of the motion picture as a legitimate amusement.

Charles Cherry is a deft player, and thoroughly at home for the screen, a satisfying demonstration of the new type of film acting, which is not so far off from the stage.

Get a good piece of white drawing paper and a nice soft pencil and see if you can copy this picture just as it is here. Perhaps you would better draw it by thinking out just how these different objects would appear. What is the cat resting on? The window sill. Then begin by making the window sill, then put in the panes of glass. (Be sure to leave the little panel where you can print in the letters "On my window sill.") Draw the cat next, and last the plant in the flower pot. Look at your own window sill and see if you can make a drawing which will look exactly like it. Notice the different lines which show the wood, glass, leaves, fur on the cat, etc.

NEWS NOTES from MOVIELAND

BY DAISY DEAN

Robert Edeson who stars in Kipling's "Light That Failed," is a deep student of dramatic art, and talks intelligently and well upon the subject. Recently he gave an interviewer some pointed and interesting remarks on the problems and as they are solved the art moves constantly to a higher plane. The future of the photoplay is very bright. The interest is increasing and will continue to increase. The silent house, and the lighted screen have a peculiar and vivid effect on you. You forget that you are sitting in a theatre—time does not exist. It's the movie lure and I'm just as great a fan as any man who spends his last nickel to watch the screen. I have been in pictures only one year, while I was on the legitimate stage for twenty-five, and yet it is safe to say that more persons have come to know me in the past year than in all the previous time. That in itself is the laurel that sits on the head of the photodrama. It is democratic to the last degree."

UNKIND CRITICS MAKE RUTH BLAIR WEEP

Ruth Blair, who is playing the leading role in the film version of "The Fourth Estate," asked her director for a realistic bit of weeping in one of her scenes.

"However did you ever learn to weep like that?" the director demanded, after witnessing the performance.

"I learned to cry," explained Miss Blair, "the morning after my debut on the stage. I read some of the criticisms."

Frank Keenan in "THE LONG CHANCE."

A western story without a "cowboy chase?" Frank Keenan as an old-time miner in a holed shirt and a plug hat with a machine gun hand in his belt and does furnish more excitement than a regiment of "Rough Riders." Does he get the girl? No. Does he do anything like any other actor would do? Again, no. Does he stalk through the picture like an avenging god, taking little bad men's guns from them and throwing the guys into the alley? No. Does he, and that immitable way that has made Frank Keenan one of the most notable actors of our times. You never saw a western play like this one, because it wasn't written according to the rules. It was written by Peter B. Kyne, whose blooded stories have made the Satevepost almost as famous as he is himself. It starts with a punch and it keeps going for five fast rounds. It leaves you gasping and when you finally come to, you know that you have seen one of the biggest actors in the biggest western play ever shown on the screen.

AT THE MAJESTIC.

Breeze Takes Alaskan Trip for Metro Pictures.

It was a peculiar party that boarded one of the trans-continental trains at New York on September 5th last, en route to Seattle, with steamer passage engaged from there to Nome, Alaska, and then up the Yukon to Fairbanks. There was Edmund Breeze, the celebrated stage star, who has lately gone into pictures, and with him a supporting cast of fourteen chosen actors, camera men, porters and everyone necessary to a long picture-making excursion.

The tremendous expense of the trip was necessary to get the exact atmosphere for the picturization of three of Robert W. Service's poems, which call for scenes at Fairbanks. Not only the scenery and settings, but the type of men so graphically and so effectively portrayed in the poems, could be secured only at this enormous amount of expense and trouble.

The first of the pictures produced by this expedition is "The Song of the Wage Slave," which is the Metro offering at the Majestic tonight and tomorrow.

It is interesting to note that one of the large items of expense connected with this trip was the insurance carried by the company, covering sickness, accident or death of any of the players while away; this was required by the compensation committee's recent ruling to protect players sent on dangerous missions.

A DAGGER IN THE BACK

That's the woman's dread when she gets up in the morning to start the day's work. "Oh! how my back aches!" GOLD MEDAL, Haarlem Oil Capsules taken today eases the backache of tomorrow—taken every day ends the backache for all time. Don't delay. What's the use of suffering? Begin taking GOLD MEDAL, Haarlem Oil Capsules today and be relieved tomorrow. Take three or four every day and be permanently free from wrenching, distressing back pain. But be sure to get GOLD MEDAL. Since 1898, GOLD MEDAL, Haarlem Oil has been the National Remedy of Holland, the Government of the Netherlands having granted a special charter authorizing its preparation and sale. The housewife of Holland would almost as soon be without bread as she would without her "Real Dutch Drops" as she quaintly calls GOLD MEDAL, Haarlem Oil Capsules. This is the one reason why you will find the women and children of Holland so sturdy and robust. GOLD MEDAL, Haarlem Oil Capsules imported direct from the laboratories in Haarlem, Holland. But be sure to get GOLD MEDAL. Look for the name clearly on the bottle with plain grammars in sealed packages at 25c, 50c and $1.00. Money refunded if it does not help you. Accept only the GOLD MEDAL. All others are imitations.

The Lone Wolf

By LOUIS JOSEPH VANCE

(Copyright, by Louis Joseph Vance)

Nor was he altogether trustful of his companion. Momentarily he grew more jealously heedful of her, of every nuance in her bearing. The least trace of added pressure on his arm, the most subtle suggestion that she wasn't altogether indifferent to him or regarded him in any way other than as the chance-found comrade of an hour of trouble would have proved enough to fix his suspicions. For such, he told himself, would be the first thought of one bent on beguiling, to lead him on by some intimation—the more tenuous and elusive the more provoking—that she found him in person not altogether objectionable.

But he failed to find anything of this in her manner.

So what was he to think? That she was almost enough to appreciate how ruinous to her design would be any such advances?

In such perplexity he brought her to the mouth of the alley and there pulled up for reconnaissance before venturing forth into the narrow, dark and utterly deserted side street that presented itself.

At this the girl gently disengaged her hand and drew away a pace or two, and when Lanyard had satisfied himself that there were no Apaches in the offing he turned to see her standing there, just within the entrance to the alley, in a pose of blank indecision.

Conscious of his regard, she turned to his inspection a face touched with a fugitive, uncertain smile.

"Where are we now?" she asked in a guarded tone.

He named the street, and she shook her head.

"That doesn't mean much to me," she confessed; "I'm so strange in Paris. I know only a few of the principal streets. Where is the Boulevard St. Germain?"

Lanyard indicated the direction: "Two blocks that way."

"Thank you." She advanced a step or two, but paused again. "Do you know, possibly, just where I could find a taxi-cab?"

"I'm afraid you'll find none in this quarter at this hour," he replied. "A fiacre, perhaps—with luck. I doubt if there is one disengaged nearer than Montmartre, where business is apt to be more brisk."

"Oh!" she cried in dismay. "I hadn't thought of that. I thought Paris never went to sleep!"

"Only about three hours earlier than most of the world's capitals. But perhaps I can advise you—"

"If you only would be so kind! Only I don't like to seem a nuisance—"

He smiled deceptively. "Don't worry about that. Where do you wish to go?"

"To the Gare du Nord."

That made him open his eyes. "The Gare du Nord!" he echoed. "But—I beg your pardon—"

"I wish to catch the first train for London," the girl informed him calmly. "You'll have some time to wait."

Lanyard informed her. "The first train leaves about half past eight, and now it's not more than five."

"That can't be helped. I can wait in the station."

He shrugged; that was her lookout—if she were sincere in her assertion that she meant to leave Paris; something which he took the liberty of doubting.

"You can reach it by the Metro," he suggested—"the underground, you know; there's a station handy—St. Germain des Pres. If you like, I'll show you the way."

Her relief seemed so naive he could almost have believed it genuine. And yet—patronage. Beneath his breath Lanyard cursed the man liberally; nothing could have been more inopportune; he needed that uncouth conveyance for his own purposes, and if it had only waited until he had piloted the girl to the Metropolitan station, he might have had it. Now he must either yield the cab to the girl or—share it with her. And why not? He could readily drop out at his destination and bid the driver continue to the Gare du Nord, and the Metro was neither quick nor direct enough for his design—which included getting under cover well before day-break.

Somewhat sulkily, then, if without betraying his temper, he signaled the cocher, opened the door, and handed the girl in with the suggestion:

"If you don't mind dropping me en route."

"I shall be very glad," she said—"anything to repay, even in part, the courtesy you've shown me!"

"Oh, please don't worry about that." He gave the driver precise directions, climbed in, and settled himself beside the girl. The whip cracked, the horse sighed, the driver swore, the aged fiacre groaned, stirred reluctantly, crawled wearily off through the thickening drizzle.

Within its body a common restraint held silence like a wall between the two.

The girl sat with face averted; reading through the window what corner signs they passed: Rue Bonaparte, Rue Jacob, Rue des Saints Peres, Quai Malaquais, Pont du Carrousel, recognizing at least one landmark in the gloomy arches of the Louvre, vaguely wondering at the inept French taste in nomenclature which had christened the vast, lowering, echoing quadrangle, the Place du Carrousel, unliveliest of public squares in her unhappy Parisian experience.

And in his turn Lanyard reviewed those well-remembered ways in vast weariness of spirit—disgusted with himself in consciousness that the girl had somehow divined his distrust.

"The Lone Wolf, eh?" he mused bitterly. "Rather, the Cornered Rat—if people only knew! Better still, the Errant—no—the Errant Ass!"

They were skirting the Palais Royal when suddenly she turned to him in an impulsive attempt at self-justification.

"What must you be thinking of me, Mr. Lanyard?"

"Oh, don't consider me, please. It doesn't matter what I think—does it?"

"But you've been so kind, I feel I owe you at least some explanation of what must seem strange to you."

"Oh, as to that," he countered cheerfully. "I've got a pretty definite notion that you're running away from your father."

"Yes. I couldn't stand it any longer—"

She caught herself up, as though tempted but afraid to say more. He waited briefly before offering encouragement.

"I hope I haven't seemed impertinent."

"No, no!"

Then this impatient negative his pause of invitation evoked no other recognition. She had subsided into her reserve, but he fancied—not altogether willingly.

Was it, then, possible that he had misjudged her?

"You've friends in London, no doubt?" he hazarded.

"No—none."

"But—"

"I shall manage very well. I shan't be there more than a day or two—till the next steamer sails."

"I see." There had sounded in her tone a finality which signified desire to drop the subject. None the less he pursued mischievously. "Permit me to wish you bon voyage, Miss Bannan—and to express my regret that circumstances have conspired to change your plans."

She was still eying him askance, dubiously, as if weighing the question of his acquaintance with her plans, when the fiacre lumbered from the Rue Vivienne into the Place de la Bourse, rounded that frowning pile, and drew up on its north side before the blue lights of the all-night telegraph bureau.

"With permission," Lanyard said, "But I'll direct the cocher very carefully to the Gare du Nord. Please don't even tip him—that's my affair. No, not another word of thanks; to have been permitted to be of service—it is a unique pleasure, Miss Bannan. And so, good night!"

With an effect that seemed little less than timid the girl offered her hand.

"Thank you, Mr. Lanyard," she said in an unsteady voice. "I am sorry—"

But she didn't say what it was she regretted, and Lanyard, standing with bare head in the driving mist, touched her fingers coolly, repeated his farewells, gave the driver both money and instructions, and saw the cab lurch away before he turned toward the telegraph bureau.

CHAPTER XIII.

Companions.

The enigma of the girl so deeply intrigued his imagination that it was only with difficulty that he concealed a noncommittal telegram to Roddy's acquaintance in the prefecture de police—that imposing personage who had watched with the man from Scotland Yard at the platform gates in the Gare du Nord.

It was couched in English when eventually composed and submitted to the telegraph clerk with a fervent, if inaudible, prayer that he might be ignorant of the tongue.

"Come at once to my room at Troyon's. Enter via adjoining room prepared for immediate action on important development. Urgent."

"RODDY."

Whether or not this were Greek to the man behind the wicket in the telegraph bureau, it was accepted with complete indifference—or, rather, with an interest that apparently evaporated upon receipt of the fees. Lanyard couldn't see that the clerk favored him with as much as a curious glance before he turned away to lose himself, to bury his identity finally and forever under the incognito of the Lone Wolf.

He couldn't have rested without taking that one step to compass the arrest of the American assassin; now, with luck and prompt action on the part of beneath the dripping vizor of his cap, keenly welcoming this diversion of a cheerless hour.

With at least outward semblance of resignation Lanyard approached the window.

"I have been guilty of some stupidity, perhaps?" he inquired with lip-civility that knew no echo in his heart. "But I am sorry—"

"The stupidity is mine," the girl interrupted in accents tense with agitation. "Mr. Lanyard, I—I—"

Her voice faltered and broke in a short, dry sob, and she drew back with an effort of instinctive distaste for public emotion. Lanyard smothered an impulse to demand roughly: "Well, what now?" and came closer to the window.

"There is something else I can do," Miss Bannan?

"I don't know. I've just found it out—I came away so hurriedly I never thought to make sure; but I've no money—only a few francs!"

After a little pause he commented: "That does complicate matters, doesn't it?"

"What am I to do? I can't go back—I won't! Anything rather. You may judge how desperate I am when I prefer to throw myself on your generosity—and already I've strained your patience—"

"Not much," he interrupted pleasantly, in a soothing voice. "But—half a moment—we'll have to talk this over."

Directing the cocher to drive to the Place Pigalle, he re-entered the cab, suspicion more than ever rife in his mind. But as far as he could see—with that confounded sergeant de ville staring—there was nothing else for it. He couldn't stand there in the rain forever, gossiping with a girl half hysterical or pretending to be.

"You see," she explained when the fiacre was again under way. "I thought I had a hundred-franc note in my pocket-book, and so I have—but the pocket-book's back there in my room at Troyon's."

"A hundred francs wouldn't see you far toward New York," he observed thoughtfully.

"Oh, I hope you don't think—"

She drew back into her corner with a little shudder of humiliation.

As if he hadn't, Lanyard turned to the window, leaned out, and redirected the driver sharply: "Impasse Stanislas!"

Dinner Stories

An old negro was charged with chicken stealing, and the judge said: "Where's your lawyer, uncle?"

"Ain't got none, judge."

"But you ought to have one," returned the court. "I'll assign one to defend you."

"No, sah, no sah, please don't do dat," begged the defendant.

"Why not?" persisted the judge. "It won't cost you anything. Why don't you want a lawyer?"

"Well, Ah'll tell you, judge," said the old man confidentially. "Ah wants ter enjy dem chickens mahself!"—Ladies' Home Journal.

"Ah," said the elder of the two men, "that's the sport! Doesn't it make you think of your happy childhood days?"

"No," replied the other. "It makes me think how slippery that street is going to be after a while and how easy it would be for you or me to fall and break an arm or a leg while trying to cross it. A Cabin From a Redwood Log.

There's a cabin in Golden Gate park, San Francisco, which is constructed of a single log of redwood. It is about twelve feet long and rests upon a heavy platform of timbers which support the weight of the hollowed log. A doorway about five feet high and eighteen inches wide admits visitors to the interior, which forms a fair sized room. The appearance of the cabin is striking because the front presents a cross section of a large redwood tree with the bark intact.—Popular Science Monthly.

How to Make Want Ads Pay

Example No. 7

Avoid Humor

Suppose you were reading our Want Ad columns, looking for a business opening. You have a few hundred dollars, let us assume, and wish to invest in some business that will also employ you.

In the Business Chance columns, you notice two Want Ads in particular that cover about what you wish. Here they are:

SAMPLE No. 1 OF A SLANGY WANT AD

1500 BUYS A HALF INTEREST in an office supply business. We have made 60% on our capital since organization. Going some, eh? Do you think you would be game enough to sit in with us? No others or thin-skinned fellows wanted.

COMMENT No. 1

There is a sort of lawdy, slipshod, pool-room atmosphere to this advertisement. You would be inclined to not risk your money.

SAMPLE No. 2 OF COMMON SENSE WANT AD

1500 BUYS A HALF INTEREST in a going, expanding office supply business. We started with $250 and our investment now is $1500. We have paid good salaries, are only current bills, have never shown less than 60% net on our actual investment, in addition to salaries. For facts address at once

COMMENT No. 2

Here we have plain business sense. There is no jaunty air of spontaneity about this Want Ad. It is sincere, and it is dignified and would attract you were you looking for this kind of opening.

Business Matters are Always Serious

It is invariably a mistake to attempt to appeal to any person for business support on the basis of humor, or slang, or street-corner expressions.

If you seek to gain confidence, which is essential in some degree always, you must make your approach (which means your Want Ad) businesslike.

Careless wording of your Want Ad detracts at once from its pulling power. Then a great number of readers can be of small value to you.

The only kind of Want Ad that will permit humor, is the kind that advertises some humorous book, toy or similar device.

CORN GROWERS MOST ANXIOUS ABOUT SEED

Poor Yields of Past Season Cause Some Anxiety As to Present Year's Crop Results.

Corn growers are most anxious about the prospects of not being able to obtain sufficient seed corn of good quality to plant their fields during the coming spring. The wet season with the early frosts left many fields with soft ears that will not germinate, it is feared, even though they were carefully saved.

One way to assure the county a good crop in 1916 is to have all seed planted thoroughly tested before time for planting so that the grower will know just what to expect under ordinary conditions. With this in view there will be held at various places about the county during the next few weeks numerous meetings of agriculturalists interested in the subject and the best methods of testing seeds will be explained.

These meetings will be held under the auspices of the various farmers' clubs, the county Y. M. C. A. groups and social centers. More meetings will doubtless be held later in the winter, but these first ones, arranged for by Secretary Markham of the county Y. M. C. A., will be the opening wedge in the campaign for a banner corn crop in Rock county by planting seed corn known to be of good germination.

The first meeting will be held on January 21st at Milton Junction, at the time of the stock-judging contest at which the Janesville Jefferson, Milton, Milton Junction and Stoughton high school students take part. The next meeting will take place at Berzeton on February 1, at a meeting of the Y. M. C. A. group composed of thirty-five members. February 2, the Shopiere Y. M. C. A. group of twenty-five members will conduct an educational meeting and on February 3 there will be a meeting at Beloit. February 4th the Rock Prairie group of the County Y. M. C. A. with nineteen members will have their meeting.

The second week of the campaign will be the group of the Y. M. C. A. with a membership of eleven; February 8th it will be held at Emerald Grove where a Y. M. C. A. group has seventeen members. February 9th it will be held under the auspices of the Newark Farmers' club. February 10th the Farmers' club of Magnolia will hold a similar meeting and on February 11th the Social Center at Fulton will close the first two weeks of the campaign.

At all these meetings the farmers will be urged to thoroughly test their seed corn. The best and latest methods of doing so will be explained and the ear test shown in detail. It is thought that there is enough good seed corn in the county to start all who desire it as it is important that the seed be accumulated and come from a climate similar to that in which it is to be grown to obtain the best results.

PROGRAM ARRANGED FOR ROAD SCHOOL

Experts in Road Building Will Address County Commissioners and Others—300 Expected.

Madison, Wis., Jan. 20.—About 300 will be in attendance at the annual road school, which opens here Jan. 21 and continues throughout the week. The Monday meeting will be opened by the registration of the county highway commissioners and other delegates, followed in the afternoon by introductory remarks by John A. Hazevidow, chairman of the commission, and an address of welcome by Governor Philipp.

State Engineer Mack will speak on the function and possible limits of the good roads school and Chief Engineer A. R. Hirst will give a brief review of the 1915 work. On Tuesday, State Geologist W. Hothchiss will speak on the geology of Wisconsin; S. E. Wood, president of the Wisconsin Association of County Clerks, will talk on the county clerk and the highway movement; and J. T. Donaghey, chief inspector, will address the meeting on the county trunk line system. On that evening there will be a debate on the subject of whether the county road system is the best for performing state road work in Wisconsin. Several of the county commissioners will appear on each side of the question.

On Wednesday, W. M. Conway, division engineer, will speak on the subject of concrete culverts and bridges, and F. M. Sergeant on the question of dirt roads. Mr. W. Torkelson, bridge engineer, will address the meeting on typical Wisconsin bridges, and Mr. Donaghey on the subject of typical Wisconsin roads.

Others to appear on the program are: John H. Miller, assistant state highway engineer of Minnesota; W. C. Buetow, division engineer of the Wisconsin highway commission; Charles E. Moore, president of the Wisconsin County Highway Commissioners' association, and Attorney General W. C. Owen.

BOOKS AS EVIDENCE IN AMERICANA SUIT

Seventy-five Thousand Dollar Suit Brought Against Book Dealers for Alleged Fraud.

Chicago, Jan. 20.—Judge A. C. Carpenter, sitting in the United States district court at Chicago, today authorized a shipment of stock, during the trial of a 75,000 suit brought by Harry M. Levinson of Saratoga Springs, N. Y., against William H. C. Sprague and Herbert O. Tomlinson, former owners of the defunct Tomlinson-Humes company, de luxe book dealers, James Plunkett, former agent for the country, and Samuel Ardie Warfield, all of Chicago. The trial opened Jan. 10.

Levinson alleges the defendants sold him for $1,000 a set of "Americana," consisting of 3,000 volumes, which he asserted were not worth more than $1,000. He produced the books in court as evidence.

Fifty other cases were ordered to be transported to the city from New York to Chicago, and these cases were piled in the courtroom where frequently various volumes were introduced by the complainant as evidence of the alleged swindle.

Levinson met Humes and Plunkett in New Orleans in May, 1911, he declared when the transaction was arranged. He added that the defendants described to him as second in value only to the famous Bancroft collection and that the sale was made on the condition that the defendants would provide customers who would be willing to pay as high as $500,000 for the collection.

Frank M. Hopkins, an expert appraiser of book values, testified that his original value of the set of "Americana" purchased by Levinson was $925. Efforts of the defense counsel to shake his testimony were futile.

COMPLETING PLANS FOR CALF CONTEST

County Stock Association Arranging for Opening of Contest on First of February.

Expectations of directors of the County Livestock Breeders' association in charge of the calf raising contest for farmer boys are that at least fifty will have entered their names by the first of February. The committee in charge of the contest is meeting with considerable success. Boys of the county who are eligible to enter the showing much enthusiasm and it is expected that a fine array of calves will be shown in August at the big Janesville fair, the closing time for the contest.

Flood country has been divided into four districts, each with competent members of the association in supervision of the work in his respective community. Villages and cities of the various districts have been selected as places from where the work is to be directed.

At Clinton, Al Monroe, J. Green and William Chiesman are in charge. At Milton, J. H. Fisher and P. B. Green are to direct the work in Magnolia. George Hemmingsway has charge at Hanover.

About thirty boys have already signed up for the contest and it is expected that with a number of meetings to be held before February 1st for the purpose of interesting the farmer boys that the total will reach fifty at the opening of the contest.

NEW YORKERS PREFER LOBSTER TO HORSE MEAT INTRODUCED AS NEW FOOD

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE]

New York, Jan. 20.—New Yorkers are not taking kindly to the horse meat diet which the board of health recently authorized the butchers to provide them. About the only effect the horse meat move has had upon the public is the revival of that good old gag about "Neigh! Neigh!" as revisited to date it reads like this: Butcher: Can't I sell you some nice horse steak today? Customer: Neigh! Neigh! At which the butcher's boy is expected always to laugh. Sort of a horse laugh you know. The public officials have made some serious effort to get the horse meat sales started, declaring they believe it would be a good thing economically. Health Commissioner Emerson points out the horse meat is cheaper than beef and quite as nutritious; though slightly different in taste and of somewhat coarser fiber, it is declared that the horse is less liable to suffer from tuberculosis than is the cow and that the horse is more discriminating in its eating and drinking than is the cow.

Arguments from various sources, against horse meat for human beings, are that the flesh is darker, tougher and less palatable than cow meat; that inspection to insure good meat would be difficult to establish; that young, healthy horses whose meat might be good to eat are worth twice as much as cattle that are only crippled, ailing, aged or broken down horses are apt to be put on the food market, and that, finally, the public would overcome its prejudice against horse meat anyhow.

There are some horse meat sales, but the market is exceedingly restricted and mighty few shops list the item. Dr. W. J. Hornady of the Bronx Zoo said today that horse meat is impure and should not be eaten by human beings. Dr. Harlow Brooks said horsemeat was a bulky idea. He said he ate lots of it in France and liked it. Katherine Bement Davis, secretary of the state partitions board, said she strongly favors the horse meat idea, had eaten it in Hungary and Bohemia and liked it, though it was a little bit tough.

Eric Nathan of the Consumers' league said he didn't like the idea either. Several other prominent New Yorkers said they didn't like the idea either. "About the nearest New York will ever come to it is in the horse meat," said one man, "is a flag in the ricehorse stakes at Sheephead Bay, and many a man will tell you he couldn't even get a square meal from them."

MILTON JUNCTION SCHOOL HOLDS SOPHOMORE CONTEST

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE]

Milton Junction, Jan. 20.—The sophomore contest was held at the assembly room at the high school on Wednesday evening. Aside from the speaking excellent music was furnished by the Glee club and instructive motion pictures were shown. In the oratorical contest Paul Greenman of the first honors and Phillip Marquardt second. In the declamatory contest Arlene Munro received first honors and Edna Maryatt second. The Misses Hilda Hanson and Minnie Gaffney and Ray Hull acted as judges.

A third social group of the Fortnightly club was composed of Mesdames D. L. Bottrell, R. A. Gilman, M. A. Richardson and Misses Lois Morris and Stella Yale, gave a four course dinner and "war" social at the home of Mrs. J. L. Bottrell, Wednesday evening. Ed. J. Bottrell represented some nation and short talk on the world's war and gave a motion in the great struggle. The house was appropriately decorated, to being the neutral ground. Excellent music was enjoyed.

Mr. and Mrs. S. S. Pierce were Janesville visitors Wednesday.

W. J. Moulding has returned from his Chicago trip.

Charles Woodward was a business caller at Janesville yesterday.

Leon Birdick was in Madison on business Wednesday.

Miss Josephine Brown has returned from her Janesville visit.

Orfordville News

Orfordville, Jan. 19.—H. C. Taylor was in the village for a few hours on Wednesday, attending to some business matters.

Ingolf Kvale, who during his Christmas vacation was taken ill with appendicitis and compelled to undergo an operation, has sufficiently recovered as to be able to return to his school work at Decorah, Ia. He left for that place on Thursday.

In connection with the supper to be served by the Woman's Study club on Friday evening, there will be held at the assembly room at the school building in the evening, a musical and literary program. Mr. Gillen, head of the social department of the state university, will be present and deliver an address.

Alva Smiley, who makes his home with his sister, Mrs. John Beck, is numbered among those who are sick.

Several gentlemen of the road have been in the village of late, ostensibly in search of work, but evidently in search of food. Orfordville has no stone pile or wood pile, hence the influx.

Fairfield, Jan. 19.—Harrison D. Wilkins was born Oct. 20th, 1837, at Woodhull, Steuben county, New York, and died at Fairfield, Wis., Jan. 19, 1916. He came to Wisconsin with his parents when a mere child and settled near Fairfield and had resided here ever since. He was an honest and industrious citizen, and has done much toward the up-building of the community. He was married to Miss Lucy Marshall at Emerald Grove, Oct. 25, 1864. He leaves besides the aged wife, two children, Mrs. Charles Gardner and Milton J. Wilkins, with whom he lived, and who, with his wife, tenderly cared for him to the last. He also leaves four grandchildren, Myrtle, Marjorie, Darwin and Ray Gardner, and two brothers, Francis, Henry of Darien, and Horace of Janesville.

The funeral services were held from his late home Tuesday afternoon, Rev. Hamilton conducting the service. Messrs. Young, Rhokenbrodt and Blakey rendered the music. The pall bearers were: Messrs. Waterman, Williams, Serl and Thomson. Monitory bearers: Messrs. More, Stewart, Dodge and Clark.

Burial was in the Fairfield cemetery.

Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Brothlund were given a farewell party at the hall Saturday evening.

The time passed swiftly with social conversation and a dainty lunch was served. We are sorry to lose Mr. and Mrs. Brothlund and family from our midst, but we wish to go with them to their new home in Clinton.

Miss Mary Swan of Ellwood, Ill., was called here to help care for her brother, Clifford, who has been seriously sick. He is better at this writing.

Those who are numbered among the sick list are: Mr. and Mrs. D. Nelson, George and Little Kenneth Brothlund, Miss Hattie Wenzel is assisting Mrs. Howard Wilkins with her household work at present. Mrs. Wilkins has been suffering with a gripp.

Miss Lura Serl returned to Whitewater Sunday, after an absence of two weeks.

NATIONAL POULTRY SHOW OPENS IN MILWAUKEE ON SATURDAY AT AUDITORIUM

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE]

Milwaukee, Wis., Jan. 20.—Although the brewers' ball was held at Milwaukee's auditorium Saturday night, there were lots of chickens in the arena today. They are here for the annual exhibition of the National poultry show.

Indications today were that there will be a large number of Wisconsin fowls entered in the big show and poultry raisers are confident that they will carry off the big prizes for the Badger state.

There have been some exceptionally good records made by fowls on exhibition at the local poultry show, held in many cities in the state. Most of the winners at the smaller shows are entered. It will continue for a week.

Orfordville News

Orfordville, Jan. 19.—H. C. Taylor was in the village for a few hours on Wednesday, attending to some business matters.

Ingolf Kvale, who during his Christmas vacation was taken ill with appendicitis and compelled to undergo an operation, has sufficiently recovered as to be able to return to his school work at Decorah, Ia. He left for that place on Thursday.

In connection with the supper to be served by the Woman's Study club on Friday evening, there will be held at the assembly room at the school building in the evening, a musical and literary program. Mr. Gillen, head of the social department of the state university, will be present and deliver an address.

Alva Smiley, who makes his home with his sister, Mrs. John Beck, is numbered among those who are sick.

Several gentlemen of the road have been in the village of late, ostensibly in search of work, but evidently in search of food. Orfordville has no stone pile or wood pile, hence the influx.

Fairfield, Jan. 19.—Harrison D. Wilkins was born Oct. 20th, 1837, at Woodhull, Steuben county, New York, and died at Fairfield, Wis., Jan. 19, 1916. He came to Wisconsin with his parents when a mere child and settled near Fairfield and had resided here ever since. He was an honest and industrious citizen, and has done much toward the up-building of the community. He was married to Miss Lucy Marshall at Emerald Grove, Oct. 25, 1864. He leaves besides the aged wife, two children, Mrs. Charles Gardner and Milton J. Wilkins, with whom he lived, and who, with his wife, tenderly cared for him to the last. He also leaves four grandchildren, Myrtle, Marjorie, Darwin and Ray Gardner, and two brothers, Francis, Henry of Darien, and Horace of Janesville.

The funeral services were held from his late home Tuesday afternoon, Rev. Hamilton conducting the service. Messrs. Young, Rhokenbrodt and Blakey rendered the music. The pall bearers were: Messrs. Waterman, Williams, Serl and Thomson. Monitory bearers: Messrs. More, Stewart, Dodge and Clark.

Burial was in the Fairfield cemetery.

Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Brothlund were given a farewell party at the hall Saturday evening.

BOB ACRES TALKS ABOUT FRIEND BOB

COMMENTS ON HIS ATTACKS ON GOVERNOR AND PLANS FOR THE FUTURE.

REVIEWS OLD DISPUTES

Would Avoid Any Complications Relative to Sending Uninstructed Delegation to National Convention.

By Bob Acres.
N. B.—This is one of a series of articles written exclusively for the Gazette on Wisconsin politics.

Milwaukee, Wis., Jan. 20.—I do not want to pose as the bird of ill-omen all the time, but listen to me. Like Poe's raven, I will quote "Nevermore," and then refer to the return of Senator La Follette to Washington after his sudden recovery from the grippe of last week to take his seat in the halls of the upper house of congress to vote on the return of the Wisconsin delegation. He came back before that body for mature deliberation. He ought to have been there weeks ago, but it did not matter. His absence from the senate has been so pronounced since his first election for chautauqua dates, illness or otherwise that neither the republicans nor democrats can count on him. It does not really matter whether he is there or not.

When Robert M. La Follette was governor he made strenuous and loud protests against interference of the federal officeholders in Wisconsin politics, yet he has done more, yes a thousand times more than the late Philletus Sawyer or John C. Spooner or any of their appointees ever thought of doing and has stamped the state with his name. Such is the change of conditions!!!

I knew Robert M. La Follette when he was a district attorney. I knew him when he went to congress. I helped elect him to congress and I voted against him when he was defeated and returned home with the rest of the republicans. John C. Spooner included. He made a fiasco of a campaign then. He told the old soldiers of sixty-three he did not want their votes. Ask anybody at the Watertown meeting when he talked of the soldiers of the late rebellion and see what they say about it and if I am not right I will apologize.

It is peculiar that at every critical period of La Follette's political career of late years his health has interfered with his continuation of a hopeless campaign. Down at Philadelphia four years ago, when he made a fiasco of the best opportunity that a man ever had of making a hit with the publishers and editors of the United States, and then when he saw he had failed he took to his bed and his friends and advisers—ostensibly acting in his behalf—withdrawed his name as a progressive candidate for presidential honors. Later he recovered and called it base ingratitude and then demanded the Wisconsin delegation which would back on him and he bitterly attacked Governor McGovern and then brought about his defeat at the senatorial election in the interests of Husting, who has long been the tool of the democratic spellbinders.

Two years ago he came back to Wisconsin to campaign against Philip, and failing to defeat him at the September primaries brought out J. J. Blaine of Escanaba, a man who had organized Wilson republican clubs two years previous, had openly booted the republican ticket, and talked in his address to La Follette, his sudden sickness overcame him again when the campaign was just getting warm and his oldtime followers were deserting him by the score. He retired as quickly as he entered.

La Follette did one thing, however, for he defeated Governor McGovern, for the senate. He did that, and no credit to him for doing so. He reversed himself upon his former opponent who deserted his former hope at the last national election by working against his interests. Husting was elected. Husting is a worthy successor to Vilas, to Mitchell, or any other Wisconsin democratic United States senator at Washington, but he suited La Follette's purposes.

Now La Follette wishes to capture the Wisconsin delegation in the national convention again as presidential candidate. It means prestige for him on the chautauqua platform it is true, but will the voters of the state give him this free advertisement again? That is the question. He has organized in his interests lots of men of the state who are just as enthusiastic as ever. They have named delegates who will be placed on the ticket to be voted on next April on election day as the La Follette delegates to the national republican convention to be held in Chicago in June.

So far so good. The other republicans of the state and I believe the thinking men are with them, have decided to hold a state convention at Madison January twenty-seventh to elect delegates at large to this same convention and have congressional districts name their two delegates to go to this same convention, if elected.

But right here in steps a gentleman with a sinister smile—the attorney general. He says that under the preferential primary system the Senate in Wisconsin must vote for this or that presidential choice for candidate. That delegates that are not designated on tickets saying for this or that candidate he doubts if they can be placed on the official ballot in April. He cites the Minnesota case where a writ is being asked to place a list of names of an instructed delegation on the ticket to be voted on in Minnesota.

His opinion may be all O. K. I do not question it in the least, but it was a matter for the national committee of the republican party to decide. However, it gives the secretary of state, an avowed La Follette spouse, a chance to exert his prerogative. He will doubtless refuse to place on the ballot at April the names of a delegation of uninstructed delegates. What is going to happen then? Court proceedings? Indignation? Well, we have had enough of that in the past.

Remember that last state convention held in Madison? Remember how we had the La Follette delegation defeated? Remember how they seized the disputed Ashland delegation? The Columbia county delegation, and then to be sure of things defeated the Second ward of Milwaukee, where no protest was made and left them without representation? Have you forgotten the gymnasium convention with its game warden, its professional thugs and its football players, who were to pass between before entering the convention hall? Do you recall the fact that when the bolt came and the convention was held in the Fuller Opera house, that La Follette's delegation, his soul-stopped aside in the interest of harmony and Samuel Cook was nominated? That M. G. Jeffris presided and T. O. Golden, both of Janesville, acted as secretary of the meeting and John C. Spooner and the late United States Senator Quarles and a good many other congressmen and former governors sat on the platform?

Do you recall that the delegates had to stand before entering the convention hall? Do you recall the fact that when the bolt came and the convention was held in the Fuller Opera house, that La Follette's delegation, his soul-stopped aside in the interest of harmony and Samuel Cook was nominated? That M. G. Jeffris presided and T. O. Golden, both of Janesville, acted as secretary of the meeting and John C. Spooner and the late United States Senator Quarles and a good many other congressmen and former governors sat on the platform?

What that convention up at Madison next week wants to do is to either decide on some favorite son, any damn one will do, or else recruit Emanuel L. Philipp and run him as Wisconsin's favorite son against La Follette. If a good-sized sack of peanuts the voters of Wisconsin had rather vote for Philipp than La Follette and it will be clear cut fight.

Philipp has got to realize this before that convention starts and his friends have to. I had hoped to be able to vote for my friend "Phil" as a delegate at large to the convention in Chicago, but as Wisconsin's favoritism, with his delegation back of him, he is in a better position than ever to do business when the time comes. I want to vote for Whitehead as delegates from the first congressional district, and I am going to be back in Racine in time to vote. I keep a residence in the first congressional district no matter what else I do, for I want to be sure of a place to vote.

FEDERAL CONTROL OVER ALL PROJECTS FOR FLOOD CHECKS

At Drainage Congress Urge Government Action Or Interstate Agreement in Fighting Water Overflow.

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.)

Cairo, Ill., Jan. 20.—A plea for federal or at least interstate supervision of all flood control projects and a conclusion that state legislatures should not attempt to solve engineering problems in connection therewith were voiced before the National Drainage Congress here today by Edward F. Bohm of Cleveland, a member of the executive committee of the congress and an authority on conservation questions.

Mr. Bohm devoted most of a lengthy paper to an exposition of Ohio's peculiar flood problems and to a review of recent legislation which he helped frame in that state. He said the floods of 1913 created a "determined effort to encompass the prevention of flood ravages" and added that the resulting Ohio conservancy act marked the "first profound legislative attempt upon the part of any of the states east of the Mississippi river to cope with a problem which every year is becoming of graver and more vital importance." Later he pointed out that Tennessee has adopted the Ohio project badly, that Indiana has done so with some modifications and that New York and Pennsylvania have enacted laws designed to further the same objects.

"That flood damage over a wide area of the United States is becoming every year a more pressing problem is conceded by every one familiar with the subject," said Mr. Bohm. "The importance, from a national standpoint, is not overlooked is manifest from the increasing pressure upon the federal congress in support of the Newlands River Regulation Act and similar measures. Were this act upon the federal statute books, the matter of federal co-operation with the states would be advanced."

California is determined to hasten the solution of its problems of flood control, according to a paper written by V. C. McClatchy, president of the state's reclamation board, and read here today before the National Drainage congress.

Work in California.
"Partly with the idea of hastening solution of these problems and the construction of the necessary works, California has created a State Water Problem Conference," said Mr. McClatchy. "This conference has been instructed to report in November, 1916, its recommendations as to an unified policy with reference to irrigation, reclamation, water storage, flood control, municipalities, drainage, with due regard to the needs of water power, mining and navigation."

Mr. McClatchy said California has four great problems in flood control.

He pointed out that one of these, the problem of the Colorado river, involves international complications and he indicated that permanent solution would depend largely upon the attitude taken by Mexico in future treaty negotiations.

"Under the existing treaty," he said, "Mexico declines to permit discharges from the stream of its tributaries which may impair navigability on the eighty mile stretch flowing through her territory; and in case of revision of the treaty she will demand division of the waters as will provide for ample irrigation of Mexican lands."

Newell's Address.
Discussing "Federal Legislation," F. H. Newell, head of the engineering department of the University of Illinois and former chief of the United States Reclamation Service, today told that rational legislation for flood protection and the reclamation of swamp and overflowed lands will come when all of the various persons interested join hands to urge it upon Congress. He said in part:

"A hundred million dollars, in round numbers, have been expended by the United States in reclamation work since the Reclamation Act went into effect. The operations are confined by law to the far western states and relate primarily to needs of agriculture in the arid or drought stricken regions. Inappreciable connected with this, however, has been the building of drainage ditches to take away an excess of moisture and to regulate the supply."

"Now the question may well be asked as to why this Act was not made applicable to lands which presented even greater needs and opportunities, namely, those along the principal rivers in the central part of the United States or near the eastern seaboard."

The answer is two-fold. First, the primary reason was the original intent to reclaim public lands by means of the proceeds from the disposal of such lands; and second, because of the united effort of the far western people in standing together for a definite purpose. It is obvious that little or nothing can be accomplished except by concerted action.

"Conditions are now similar to those which prevailed before the passage of the Reclamation or Newlands Act. A few far seeing, earnest men were then actively at work, but the body of the so-called 'practical politicians' were skeptical regarding the importance of the bill."

"The federal government already has in the Reclamation Service an effective organization of engineers who have built some of the largest works of water control in the country. It also has in the department of Agriculture a body of expert advisors on farm drainage and on the work of drainage organization and districts. It would not require much effort to bring them together and to make doubly effective the experience already gained. It is appreciation of this that has induced Senator Newlands to push forward a second great bill for reclamation and conservation, which he has been advocating since 1902, designed to bring about better co-operation among governmental and other agencies and to provide a business-like procedure by which work on the rivers can be taken up in an orderly manner."

AMERICAN AVIATOR GIVES JAPANESE MANY THRILLS DURING TWO EXHIBITIONS

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.)

Tokio, Jan. 20.—Rarely has an event excited the Japanese people as did the flight of Charles Niles, the American aviator who gave two exhibitions before some of the largest crowds ever witnessed in Japan. The first day's crowd was estimated at 200,000 and the second at 300,000. The house-tops and other points of vantage about the Aoyama parade where Niles maneuvered in the air were black with people and many arrived before the time of flying in order to get a good position. Prince Higashi Kuni, who is deeply interested in aviation, was present on both occasions. As were several of the junior princes of the imperial Japanese house.

Mr. Niles did his flying under the auspices of the Aero Club of Japan, of which the president is General Gaishi Nagaoka.

This was the first time that the people of Japan have seen aviation feats in mid-air and the manoeuvres of Mr. Niles, who flew upside down, looped the loop, and gave an exhibition of what is called "falling leaves," caused wonder. The great crowd became so unmanageable that it broke loose and rushed to the place where Mr. Niles had landed. It was only after some desperate struggling that the air man's assistants were able to force their way through and rescue the machine as well as the air man from the enthusiastic and somewhat embarrassing acclamations of the crowd.

Mr. Niles was presented to Prince Higashi Kuni, who warmly complimented him upon his exhibition. The like of which, he said, he had never seen. Several floral pieces were also presented to the aviator.
